

Today, everyone is fond of online social networking websites and there are number of different websites for different purposes like social purpose and business purpose. I was also mad about online social media when for the very first time, I came to know about it from my one of the friends. I stepped into social media by creating my first account on Facebook after completion of my high-school studies. I was too excited at that time and started spending too much time via computer and mobile phone. I spent a lot time on Facebook to make new friends, chat with them and to see the updates of my friends. Gradually, I started losing interest in Facebook as I was at my saturation point.

After that, I came to know about Instagram as most of my friends were using it to post pictures. I created account in Instagram just to see the updates and pictures of my family and friends. Then, I started posting some pictures of my niece, nephew and later of mine. I liked to see the comments and number of likes that I got for each post. I also purchased some gifts from Instagram, but I didn't find it great for shopping. Eventually, I started using Pinterest, which I found most useful for getting ideas about anything like trend in clothes and jewelry; knowledge about diet plan, exercises etc.

When I completed under graduation, I created profile in LinkedIn, which is a popular social media site for business purpose. I found it useful for connecting to people and searching for great recruiters and getting job of our choice. Other social media like YouTube, I always find it useful for entertain, knowledge and also for study.

Currently, I am using all social media sites that I have discussed above, but now I just use them for a very limited amount of time because now I am not crazy about it. WhatsApp is the one, I am using most frequently to place video call or audio call to my family and friends living abroad. I also use for chatting with them and with my friends. I find it very useful as we can have only our contacts and we can talk to them. Thus, now I am not a social media person.
